This ASU was issued to expand the use of the proportional amortization method of accounting for equity investments in tax credit programs beyond those in LIHTC programs. The ASU allows entities to elect the proportional amortization method, on a tax credit program by tax credit program basis, for all equity investments in tax credit programs meeting the eligibility criteria. The Company adopted this ASU in the first quarter of 2024. There was no impact upon adoption. Currently, all of the Company's equity investments in tax credit programs height:120%">The Company monitors its investment securities available for sale for credit loss impairment on an individual security basis.

No securities were determined to be credit loss impaired during the three and six months ended June 30, 2024 and 2023. At June 30, 2024, the Company did not have an intent to sell securities that were in significant unrealized loss positions, and it was not more likely than not that the Company would be required to sell these securities before recovery of the amortized cost basis, which may be at maturity. In making this determination, the Company considered its current and projected liquidity position including its ability to pledge securities to generate liquidity, its investment policy as to permissible holdings and concentration limits, regulatory requirements and other relevant factors. We have not sold, and do not anticipate the need to sell, securities in unrealized loss positions to generate liquidity.

This analysis was based on a scenario that we believe to be generally more conservative than our reasonable and supportable economic forecast at June 30, 2024, and incorporated assumptions about voluntary prepayment rates, collateral defaults, delinquencies, severity and other relevant factors as described further below. Our analysis also considered the structural characteristics of each security and the level of credit enhancement provided by that structure.Private label residential MBS and CMOsAt June 30, 2024, 114 private label residential MBS and CMOs were in unrealized loss positions. We also regularly monitor sector data including home price appreciation, forbearance, delinquency, special servicing and prepay trends as well as other economic data that could be indicative of stress in the sector. Underlying delinquencies in this sector remain low. We consider collateral, deal, sector and tranche level performance as well as maturity and refinance risk. Our June 30, 2024 analysis projected weighted average collateral losses for this category of 7% compared to weighted average credit support of 53%. As of June 30, 2024, 54% of impaired securities in this category, based on carrying value, were externally rated AAA, 19% were rated AA and one security was not externally rated. Collateralized loan obligationsAt June 30, 2024, three collateralized loan obligations were in unrealized loss positions. Unrealized losses totaled less than 1% of total amortized cost of this segment at June 30, 2024. Our analysis of cash flows expected to be collected on these securities incorporated assumptions about collateral default rates, loss severity, and delinquencies, calibrated to take into account idiosyncratic risks associated with the underlying collateral. In developing those assumptions, we took into account each sector’s performance pre-, during and post the 2008 financial crisis. We regularly engage with bond managers to monitor trends in underlying collateral including potential downgrades and subsequent cash flow diversions, liquidity, ratings migration, and any other relevant developments. While we have observed some deterioration in underlying collateral performance due in large part to rising costs, the high credit quality of these securities and adequacy of subordination to cover projected collateral losses supports the conclusion that there is no credit loss impairment. Our June 30, 2024 analysis projected weighted average collateral losses for impaired securities in this category of 12% compared to weighted average credit support of 41%. As of June 30, 2024, 28% of the impaired securities in this category, based on carrying value, were externally rated AAA and 72% were rated AA.Non-mortgage asset-backed securitiesAt June 30, 2024, six non-mortgage asset-backed securities were in unrealized loss positions. These securities are backed by student loan collateral. Our analysis of cash flows expected to be collected on these securities incorporated assumptions about collateral default rates, loss severity, delinquencies, voluntary prepayment rates and recovery lag. In developing assumptions, we took into account collateral type, delineated by whether collateral consisted of loans to borrowers in school, refinancing, or a mixture. Our June 30, 2024 analysis projected weighted average collateral losses for impaired securities in this category of 4% compared to weighted average credit support of 27%.
