(Nasdaq and TASE: FRSX) (the "Company"), an innovator in 3D perception systems, announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, Eye-Net Mobile Ltd. (the "Company") has successfully passed rigorous field tests conducted by UTAC, a renowned French organization specializing in vehicle testing, certification, and safety solutions. The field tests were conducted under the strict European New Car Assessment Programme (the "Euro NCAP") regulations. The evaluation by UTAC is part of Eye-Net's collaboration with Software R&C publique in its roadmap to deploy Eye-Net's digital services in France. A The trials validated the effectiveness of Eye-Net's cellular vehicle-to-everything (V2X) technology in enhancing road safety and preventing collisions. The tests, utilizing an autonomous vehicle and automated validation platforms connected to the Eye-Net solution, simulated real-world collision scenarios and achieved a perfect 100% success rate. In each scenario, the system consistently triggered the autonomous vehicle's automatic emergency braking system, in time to enable safe braking and collision prevention, with alert timing variations of less than 20 milliseconds. A UTAC's validation of our cellular V2X technology according to Euro NCAP regulations marks a significant milestone for Eye-Net and the automotive industry. As a recognized authority in advanced driver assistance systems testing, we believe that UTAC's endorsement validates our technology's superior effectiveness. Additionally, it paves the way for our expansion into the automotive market and may open up new opportunities for strategic partnerships with leading automotive manufacturers and suppliers. We believe that this successful performance demonstrates that our solution is ready to be integrated into vehicles worldwide, potentially saving lives and revolutionizing road safety, A said Dror Elbaz, Chief Executive Officer of Eye-Net.
